GANGLAND SHOOTS "HANGING PROSECUTOR"

CHICAGO SCENE OF DASTARDLY MURDER CRIME

WILLIAM McSWIGIN, ASSISTANT STATE'S ATTORNEY,
ASSASSINATED

CONSIDERED ONE OF ACES OF STATE'S ATTORNEY CROWE'S
STAFF

Chicago, April 28.—(UP)—Organized law and the law of gangland were in the grips of warfare today as a result of the assassination of William McSwigin, Chicago's "hanging prosecutor," and two men with whom he was conversing last night.

McSwigin, considered one of the aces of State's Attorney Crowe's staff because of the five hanging verdicts he won in recent criminal prosecutions, was shot down by a volley of fire from a machine gun, mounted on a curtained automobile. Two men standing near him, James J. Doherty and Thomas Duffy, fell before the same fire.

McSwigin and Doherty died almost instantly. Duffy succumbed in a west side hospital a few hours later. The triple murder, occurring in the suburb of Cicero, where vice and crime have long held sway, aroused Chicago and Cook county authorities. Told of the crime at midnight, State's Attorney Crowe summoned several of his aides and joined forces with the policemen to run down the assassins. Haunts of Cicero gangsters were raided and scores of suspects were herded into police headquarters within four hours after the shooting. Foremost of several theories advanced was that McSwigin was slain by Sicilian gangsters in revenge for his efforts to send two of their number to the gallows in a recent murder prosecution.

The fact, however, that Doherty and Duffy were known to be participants in a bitter beer running feud suggested the possibility that McSwigin met his death by accident. He had been mingling with the criminal element in Cicero in search of evidence upon which to prosecute Martin Durkin, Chicago's "shooting sheik."

Possibility of a fourth man having met his death in the attack was suggested today by Captain of Detectives Stege. The fourth man, Stege told the United Press, may be Miles O'Connell, bosom friend of Doherty. Stege is looking for the automobile in which the bodies of McSwigin and Doherty were whisked away from the scene of the killings and in this case he believes he will find O'Connell's body. O'Connell had been seen earlier in the evening in company with Doherty.

Witnesses to the triple slaying said McSwigin, Doherty and Duffy were standing together in front of a Cicero saloon when a curtained automobile drew up before them and stopped. A machine gun was pushed through a flap of the curtain and almost immediately a rain of bullets was fired at the men. Police later counted 22 bullet marks on the front of the saloon and six on a tree near the spot where McSwigin was standing, evidence of the number of shots that were fired.

Several men standing at the bar of the saloon dropped to the floor to escape the fire.

As soon as the attacking automobile had driven away, the bodies of McSwigin and Doherty were picked up and carried to another suburb, Berwyn, and left lying in a vacant lot. Duffy was taken by several of his friends to a nearby hospital. He later regained consciousness and died early today.

Although only 26 years old, McSwigin had attained a position of prominence at Chicago's criminal bar. He was looked upon as one of the stars of State's Attorney Crowe's 70 assistants. Five men whom he had prosecuted during the last year were sentenced to hang, from which he had earned the title of "Chicago's hanging prosecutor." He had been assigned as chief prosecutor of Martin Durkin, one of the boldest of Chicago's gunmen and was working on that case when he was assassinated.

LAY MURDER TO BEER WAR

Chicago, April 28.—A race war for control of Chicago's beer traffic was blamed today for the slaying of three men, including an assistant state's attorney, by a group of gangsters armed with a machine gun. "Looks like the old beer feud," (Continued on Page 5)

BABY, AGE NINE MONTHS, BURNED TO DEATH IN CRIB

Bemidji, Minn., April 28.—(UP)—Dorothy Spooner, 9 months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Spooner, East Bemidji, burned to death in her crib when fire destroyed the house where she was sleeping last night.

The mother and five other children, ranging in age from 3 to 11 years, were eating supper in a tent beside the house. Fire shut off entrance to the home before it was noticed.

Mrs. Spooner was burned slightly attempting to rescue the baby. The other children were uninjured. The father, somewhere in Michigan, searching for work, has not been located.

PANEL OF 30 ORDERED FOR TRIAL OF KIEWEL

JOHN R. KIEWEL, FERGUS FALLS,
CHARGED WITH MISHANDLING FUNDS

WAS IN CHARGE OF A CO-OPERATIVE PACKING INSTITUTION

Bemidji, Minn., April 28.—(UP)—Order for a panel of 30 prospective jurors from which to select 12 men for the trial of John R. Kiewel, Fergus Falls, charged with mishandling funds of a co-operative packing plant, is to be issued soon by Judge C. W. Stanton.

Judge Stanton was designated by Governor Theodore Christianson to conduct Kiewel's trial. He denied a motion for dismissal of the case, but granted a change of venue from Ottertail to Beltrami county. June 8 has been set as the trial date.

Kiewel was originally indicted on three counts charging irregularity in his handling of Fergus Falls packing plant funds. Upon agreement of attorneys for the defense and the county attorney he was allowed to plead guilty to one count with the understanding that the other two would be dismissed. The plea was entered and a fine of $500 imposed. Later under pressure of public sentiment Kiewel was reindicted on the two charges previously dismissed. The case was taken to the governor to designate a judge before whom motions could be laid.

Judge Stanton first denied a motion that charges be dismissed because the defendant had already been in jeopardy on the same charges. This was appealed to the state supreme court which upheld Judge Stanton's denial.

DALL CO-OPERATIVE CREAM-

Randall, Minn., April 28.—(UP)—Land O' Lakes butter valued at $600 was stolen from the Randall Co-operative Creamery company last night.

The thieves pilfered a crowbar, flashlight and candles from the Burt Oil company for use in the robbery. A door in the creamery was pried open and the butter was hauled away apparently by truck.

FORECLOSURE SALE OF THE MILWAUKEE ROAD IS ORDERED

DECISION MADE YESTERDAY BY FEDERAL JUDGE JAMES H.
WILKERSON

A SPECIAL MASTER APPOINTED TO HANDLE THE SALE

Chicago, April 28.—(UP)—A foreclosure sale of the properties of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad was ordered yesterday by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The railroad has been in the hands of receivers for a number of months. Decision for the foreclosure sale was over the protest of Attorney General Herman L. Ekern of Wisconsin, who contended there should be no foreclosure sale until the road had complied with state laws.

A special master to handle the sale was to be appointed late yesterday.

Failure of the company, one of the largest bankruptcy proceedings in the country, involves approximately $750,000,000 worth of railroad property. The road is one of the big mid-west carriers. Judge Wilkerson in making announcement of the foreclosure sale did not set a time and this probably will not be decided until the special master takes charge of the case.

Chicago, April 28.—The final collapse of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway will be written in Butte, Mont., when the 11,000 miles of railroad property will be placed on the public auction block, it was learned today.

The big middle western carrier, which struggled feebly against the rising tide of indebtedness from the time that government control was taken until bankruptcy last spring, was ordered sold to the highest bidder late yesterday by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. Herbert A. Lundahl, local attorney, was appointed the special master to knock down the road.

Date for the sale has not been made public and it probably will be several weeks before final arrangements can be completed for the sale. It was 63 years ago that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad which now serves a vast middle western agricultural territory extending from Chicago to Seattle, came into being, through foreclosure.

A number of small railroads were aimlessly battling Jim Hill, Jay Gould and other western railroad pioneers for supremacy in the lucrative western fields. Dissolution finally came to them and from the dissolution emerged the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

One of the first presidents of the St. Paul was Russell Sage. He readily foresaw the possibilities of a carrier which would connect the middle west and the coast through a northern route skirting Canada, and immediately pushed the road across the country. From the start it was a success.

Then during the war came government control and the 11,000 miles of St. Paul property was tossed into the government-operated plan. Since then, according to the rail heads and the receivers, the C. M. & St. P., which is the commonly used term for the road, has been tobogganing.

On March 12, 1925, the Binley Coal company brought a friendly bankruptcy suit against the rail company. They had a claim of $125,000. But in the suit it was pointed out that outstanding indebtedness against the road was $465,000,000 of which $55,000,000 was owed to the government. The receivers were H. E. Byram, Mark W. Potter and Edward N. J. Brundage.

New York bankers then attempted to reorganize the road under a plan known as the Kuhn-Loeb plan, which called for assessments of $28 per share of preferred stock and $32 per share on common stock. In addition there was to be a new issue of gold bonds, a new adjustment mortgage and several new stock issues.

It is this plan, which remains in modified form, as the goal for reorganization of the road and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York, is considered one of the most logical bidders for the road's property.

Protests have been raised by the Jameson interests, represented by former Governor Nathan L. Miller of New York, the Roosevelt & Son

FRENCH FRANC TUMBLES TO A NEW LOW POINT

EXPLORERS NOW AT KING'S BAY, SPITZBERGEN

BEAUTIFUL WEATHER, FAVOR-ABLE WINDS SPELL EARLY START OF FLIGHT

AMUNDSEN AND ELLSWORTH TO ATTEMPT TO REACH NORTH POLE BY AIR

Arthur Lewin, United Press staff correspondent, has arrived at King's Bay, on the Spitzbergen island, far within the Arctic circle, to tell the story of this year's polar expeditions.

After a long and arduous trip by whaler and steamer through the icy waters of the far north and after once being compelled to put back because of engine trouble on his steamer, Lewin is now established and has cabled his initial story to the United Press.

He is the first press association correspondent to arrive on the scene of Captain Roald Amundsen's jump-off by dirigible to the pole and his dispatches will be carried exclusively by United Press client newspapers.

King's Bay, via Spitzbergen, April 27.—Beautiful weather and favorable winds have combined to speed the preparations of the noted explorers, Captain Roald Amundsen and his companion, Lincoln Ellsworth, for their next dramatic attempt to reach the pole by air.

A week of feverish activity has followed the arrival here last Wednesday of two Arctic pioneers. Their ship, the Knut Skaaluren, sailed up to the quay here blessed by a wind, sunshine and a temperature of only 40 degrees, which combined to break the nearly fast ice in the bay. It seemed a good omen for the expedition, following as it did a long period of clear, cold weather with northeasterly winds and severe frost.

This fine weather has continued with the result that Amundsen and Ellsworth are nearly ready now for the arrival of the Norge, the dirigible in which they expect to make history, by being the first to cross the pole by air. The Norge is at Leningrad, whence it is expected to leave Saturday or Sunday for King's Bay.

Its huge hangar has been completed and is ready to receive it. The mooring mast was given its finishing touches today and the work of unloading the cargo of the Knut Skaaluren, most important of which is the hydrogen gas for the Norge, is virtually done.

Meantime Amundsen and Ellsworth are restlessly awaiting their ship. They are taking long sking excursions about the country here to pass the time away.

It is estimated that at least 500 school children between the ages of six and 16 years will take part in athletic contests. A parade is to be a feature of the day.

banking house of New York, and the state of Wisconsin. Roosevelt & Son, however, have swung away from the contestants now.

Local business today declared that collapse of the company and the resultant foreclosure sale probably was one of the largest foreclosures in the history of American business. The property involved is said to be worth $750,000,000 and this is to go to the highest bidder out at Butte, Mont.

CORSICAN BANDIT IS BURIED TODAY, POPULACE GRIEVES

MORE THAN 25,000 PERSONS
LINED THE FUNERAL ROUTE

NOT A GENDARME MINGLED WITH THE CROWD AT AJACCIO

Ajaccio, Corsica, April 28.—(UP)—Ronce Romanetti, the most successful bandit of the twentieth century, was buried today amid an amazing demonstration of popular grief such as rarely is accorded any but princes, presidents and heroes of battle.

More than 25,000 persons lined the funeral route or followed the coffin, and not a gendarme dared mingle with the crowd, which was there to honor a man who had been the enemy of gendarmerie during a career of banditry stretching over 25 years.

Romanetti was a free-handed bandit. He stole exclusively from those who had enough money to spare a bit to him and to his poverty-stricken friends. This small town was the birth place of Napoleon, but it paid greater homage to the beloved Corsican Robin Hood than ever it rendered to the great emperor. That was as Romanetti would have wished it for he always compared himself with his illustrious fellow Corsican and habitually signed himself "N" as did the emperor.

Today was virtually a day of national mourning for the bandit who was honest according to his code, who killed without hesitation and who finally died because a member of his gang resented the steady discipline insisted upon by the leader. Sincerity, grief and tremendous respect for Romanetti were evident among the native mourners.

Innumerable scuffles took place around the coffin as it was borne along, because hundreds desired the honor of carrying the dead body.

It finally was necessary to exchange bearers every few yards to prevent serious fighting.

The most picturesque group in the crowd of mourners were the sailors of the port and the bearded, rugged men of the mountains who for years had followed Romanetti's lead in banditry.

These latter came with rifles slung on their shoulders, ready to resume the battle against the law. Revolvers and knives were stuck in their belts and while they wept unashamedly as they plodded behind the coffin, still they kept up a sharp watch to left and right as if searching for the traitorous slayer.

Romanetti began his career with the murder of a father in 1900 who sought to prevent the kidnapping of his daughter. Since then he has ruled a mountain domain of about five square miles, enjoying in his later years an income of more than $25,000 annually. Much of this he gave away.

DULUTH TO VOTE ON AMENDMENTS

Duluth, April 28.—(UP)—Duluth will vote tomorrow on amendments to several sections of the city charter intended to change from the present commission to the aldermanic form of government.

The proposals to be submitted to the electorate are remnants of the original proposal of the Duluth municipal government league, which passed the test of constitutionality in the district court.

The court ordered several proposed changes struck from the ballot and it is now claimed that any measures voted will be valid.

GARRICK CLUB SPIKED PUNCH UNDER THE BAN

Minneapolis, April 28.—(UP)—Spiked punch, served at a dance on the night of the junior ball, brought a suspension to the Garrick club of the University of Minnesota.

E. E. Nicholson, dean of student affairs, announced the suspension is for the 1926-7 school year.

Young women who partook of the punch complained to school authorities that the drink contained alcohol.

The dance, called the "Jay Bee Junior Ball," was sponsored by the Garrick club, a dramatic organization, and was not an official affair.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD WAS A GYPSY QUEEN

AUTHORITIES OF TWO STATES
SEEK TO TRACE ITINERANT BAND

BELIEVE SOME MEMBER IS RE-SPONSIBLE FOR THE MURDER

Ellsworth, Wis., April 18.—(UP)—Search for a strange itinerant band, some member of which is believed responsible for a murder, was instituted today by Wisconsin and Minnesota authorities.

The search started following identification of the woman whose body was found in the Mississippi river near here last week as the queen of a Gypsy caravan, which had been camping in the neighborhood.

Ellsworth and Bay City residents who visited the morgue yesterday agreed the body was that of the pretty fortune teller recently seen in the two towns. The woman was about 30 years old and believed a middle class Gypsy.

Two men, one French and the other Irish, another Gypsy woman and four children were with the fortune teller, according to police informants. They traveled in two light sedans, one of which drew a trailer.

The Gypsies are said to have gone from here to Bay City a week ago and then on to Red Wing, Minn. The body now held at the morgue was found last Friday clad only in a night gown.

Marks on the woman's face indicate murder according to the coroner. There is a gash in the forehead and marks of blows on the nose and cheeks. Authorities believe the woman was killed and the body thrown into the water.

HEAVY DAMAGE TO WINTER CROPS

WHEAT IN SOUTHERN MINNE-SOTA DAMAGED BY SAND AND WIND STORM

Marshall, Minn., April 28.—(UP)—Heavy damage was done to winter wheat crops of southern Minnesota by sand and wind storms which reached a climax in ferocity last night.

Tender sprouts were beaten by the driven dust and in many places the ground will have to be resown. Some farmers reported the present damage slight but added that unless rain comes the roots, which have been exposed to the sun by the drifting soil, will wither and die.

There has been no attempt to estimate the damage to crops.

LOOSE SOIL IS STRIPPED FROM FIELDS

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 28.—Farmers in this section suffered inestimable losses from wind and dust storms which culminated early today in a 50 mile gale.

The land was stripped of two or three inches of loose soil which was blown into drifts like snow. Thousands of acres of wheat land were badly damaged and will have to be resown.

Pioneers declared it to be the worst storm in 50 years. The sky was darkened by clouds of whirling earth, cars were stalled in sand drifts and farmers were driven from their fields.

ALSO SOME MINOR THINGS, THEN ADJOURN

COOLIDGE'S MAJOR LEGISLATION
PROGRAM CLOSELY FOLLOWED

THE WATSON-PARKER RAILROAD
MEDIATION BILL NOW BE-FORE SENATE

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, April 28.—Give farm relief legislation a chance, clean up uncontroverted minor measures and adjourn, that is the program of republican leaders in both houses of congress, which is expected to take form before the end of the week.

With adoption of the Czecho-Slovakian debt settlement by the senate today President Coolidge's program of major legislation will be fulfilled and members of both houses are anxious for personal reasons to accede to the desire of the chief executive for early adjournment. They want to get back home for the primaries.

The only thing absolutely necessary now is to grant the various farm relief measures an opportunity for consideration. If it then develops that debate upon them will go on into summer a movement then may be organized to shunt them over until December. If one or two of them get through quickly and this is doubted, then they will be passed quickly and adjournment will be taken.

The Watson-Parker railroad labor mediation bill and the Pepper-MacFadden branch banking bill will be passed by the senate before May 10. The $16,000,000 public buildings bill also may squeeze through in that time.

Washington, April 28.—Eleven republican senators formed themselves into a band at the capitol luncheon today to oppose adjournment of congress by every practical means until farm relief legislation is brought to a vote.

SOUGHT AID TO STRENGTHEN DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT

Washington, April 28.—(UP)—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews' major request for legislation to strengthen enforcement of the dry law has been granted by the house.

With only scattering opposition the house late yesterday passed the Green bill creating bureaus of prohibition and customs. The final vote was 196 to 4.

Andrews has other recommendations pending but it is unlikely they will be acted on at this session. Whether the senate will act on the Green bill is doubtful.

The bill gives the prohibition and customs services an independent status. Andrews believes they both can function more effectively than as a part of the internal revenue service.

CONCORDIA COLLEGE ENDOWMENT FUND PASSES $100,000

Moorhead, Minn., April 28.—(UP)—The Concordia college endowment fund campaign has passed the $100,000 mark. It was announced today by President J. N. Brown. Pre-campaign contributions now total $115,000 including cash, pledges and real estate and securities.

Two farms were donated, one of 160 acres in western North Dakota and one of 80 acres in western Minnesota. Residence property in Moorhead valued at $7,500 was also among the contributions.

The organized campaign for funds will start May 16 and last seven days. The goal is $500,000.

CARL OLSEN STATEMENT

Claims He Was Not Searching For Moonshine, When He Fired Meadow

A misunderstanding appears to have arisen by the parties recently involved in the Carl Olsen case of setting fire to a meadow, for which he was fined $25 and costs, concerning the reason for Olsen's action in setting the fire.

Basil Heath, attorney for Olsen today made the following statement for his client:

"Carl Olsen, of Pequot claims that he did not make any statement in regard to hunting moonshine whiskey at the time he was arrested and convicted for setting a fire near Gull Lake. He claims that at no time did he tell the court or the officers that he was hunting for moonshine whiskey."

Sheriff Reid this morning made the following statement to the Dispatch:

"We came upon Olsen as he was setting fire to the grass. He told me he was looking for two empty bottles which were hidden in the grass. We found the empty bottles later on. We took chase after Olsen who jumped in a car and caught up to him seven miles up the road."

Farm Womens Improvement Club

The Farm Womens Improvement club of North Long Lake met at the home of Mrs. Clarence Barr on Thursday, April 22, to take up the second lesson of the clothing project. Fourteen women were in attendance with all the paraphernalia necessary to cut a pattern, or make a sample.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. R. B. Thompson, and, after the necessary business of the club was disposed of, the meeting was turned over to the two club leaders, Mrs. E. Ackerson, and Mrs. Barr.

A busy time was spent in measuring to find the correct sizes and in cutting patterns.

Samples of neck finishes and plaques were displayed by the club leaders and directions were given for making them.

After the lesson the ladies spent a social hour. Refreshments were served by four of the ladies.

Appreciation of Merit

I think that, however a thoughtful man may suffer from the defects and absurdities of his company, he cannot without affectation deny to any set of men and women a sensibility to extraordinary merit. The coarse and frivolous have an instinct of superiority, if they have not a sympathy, and honor it in their blind and capricious way with sincere homage.—Emerson.

NATION WIDE PROGRAM TO CHECK CRIME

FORMULATED AT WASHINGTON AND PRESENTED TO PRES.
COOLIDGE

NATIONAL CRIME COMMISSION
SPONSORS THE MOVE-MENT

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, April 28.—The first national wide program for discouragement of increasing numbers of crimes of violence against property and persons was formulated here today and put up to President Coolidge for approval.

In an announced attempt to harden and speed the punishing hand of criminal justice, the national crime commission, which includes former Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri, former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Judge Kavanagh, noted Chicago jurist; Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, and other leaders, drafted a plan for promotion of organization of local criminal commissions throughout the United States to discourage unlawful violence from all angles.

Three committees of the organization were meeting here today and the executive committee following a call upon President Coolidge at noon turned to consideration of a plan for local action through hundreds of fact finding and action demanding bodies, which would be presented to a meeting tonight on methods of speeding the law, shortening the convictions and acquitting the innocent prolongations of appeal from cent more speedily, held a session to cover his proposed widespread program of procedure changes.

The executive committee's call on President Coolidge was a short one. It is indicated that Mr. Coolidge expressed his approval of the plan for enlargement of anti-crime activities which would be presented tonight by Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy.

The commission's active committee this afternoon met with six representatives of local crime commissions of Chicago, Cleveland, the state of Minnesota and other places, to discuss plans for enlargement of activities and later with nearly a score of state's attorneys general for a convention of their own.

GRADE SAMPLING STATIONS EDICT EXPECTED SOON

STATE RAILROAD AND WARE-HOUSE COMMISSION TO ACT
ON RECOMMENDATIONS

AS MADE BY THE NORTHWEST
SHIPPERS' ADVISORY BOARD

St. Paul, April 28.—(UP)—The state railroad and warehouse commission will act on recommendations of the Northwest Shippers' Advisory board in the matter of grade sampling stations, O. P. B. Jacobson, chairman of the commission, announced today.

Discontinuance of eight grade sampling stations was asked at the board meeting here yesterday. The railroad commission has been conducting the stations at the request of shippers and railroads, Jacobson said, and they will be abolished if no longer wanted.

He pointed out that state law does not provide for the stations but that they were established on request in 1903 and have been maintained since. Shippers took the lead in the fight to have them eliminated on the ground that grain is delayed unnecessarily.

Stations are located at Glenwood, Staples, Wilmar, St. Cloud, Cass Lake, Thief River Falls, Bass Lake and Sandstone.

J. F. Reed, chairman of the board named a committee composed of B. F. Benson, Minneapolis; H. J. Atwood, Duluth; A. J. McInnis, Valley City, N. D.; J. W. Raisp, Pierre, S. D.; and J. F. Gustafson, Windom, Minn., which is to investigate the need for the stations and report back not later than May 15.

The Sands of Waikiki

By LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

IT IS something to be thirty-five and look twenty-six. Even better perhaps than to be an heiress. Anne Lawton was both. Yet she was unmarried and unbetrothed. There had been men—oh, yes, several, but they had worn the lean and hungry look of fortune hunters and she had resolved to remain single rather than to wed for any other reason than love on both sides.

Of course, in addition to these dismissed suitors, there was always George Stanley, who could never be called a fortune hunter because of the fact that he was the owner of the second largest sugar plantation in Hawaii. It was as a member of his party that Anne was now staying at Waikiki, although it was rather through friendship for George's sister than for George himself that she had consented to come, not wishing to raise false hopes in George's ample bosom. To wed George would be to banish the last hope of romance forever. For George was forty and looked fifty.

Anne sat this morning on the beach, lifting the shining sand in handfuls and letting it sift through her fingers.

Not far from her a party of bathers had thrown themselves down and Anne watched them idly. A couple of middle-aged women, a slim browned girl, and a clean-limbed, nice looking young fellow—all Americans from the States, judging by their conversation, much of which drifted unavoidably to Anne.

Suddenly she saw one of the women nudge the other, and both looked, as casually as possible, in her direction.

Oh, yes, Anne knew exactly what they were saying. "My dear, that's old Lawton's daughter. Her picture was in the photogravure section Sunday."

Anne could see that the young people weren't especially interested, but the women continued to nudge each other and whisper.

Anne met that evening the most interesting member of that party. The young ensign from the visiting warship in Pearl harbor with whom she had been dancing at the hotel hop brought him up and introduced him. Later Anne danced with him three times in succession, and once again before the hop was over, and when they parted he suggested that she call him "Jerry" instead of "Mr. Darlington."

Now two things Anne instinctively recognized. First, that the boy was not the fortune hunting type. Something honest and true shone in his gray eyes. Secondly, that he took her for a girl somewhere around his own age, which she judged might be around the middle twenties.

He represented to her her dream of a fairy prince come true, and when he asked if he might call upon her she gladly permitted him. After that she drove with him to the Pall for the superb view and to Diamond Head for tea at a wayside inn.

One afternoon they had come in from riding the surf and were sunning themselves on the warm sands. Suddenly Jerry frowned. "Joan, ought to know better," he said, "than to swim out so far."

"Is Joan your sister?" asked Anne. "Why, no, what made you think that? Our mothers are old friends. That's all." Then his face cleared. "There she comes now. 'Fraid I'd have to go after her."

The episode set Anne thinking. Was it possible that she had broken up a love affair between the two? Then she shrugged her slender shoulders. Let the other girl hold Jerry, if she could. If she couldn't, that was her own particular misfortune.

For Anne knew that a proposal hovered on Jerry's lips. And she had already decided upon her answer. Never again, she knew, would youth lay its heart at her feet.

Anne was going to a yacht club dance that night with Jerry. It was during intermission that he led her out to a little balcony hidden from people and sweet with the perfumed Hawaiian night.

"Anne, darling," he began at once. "Anne, darling, I love you. If you—if you don't think I'm too much of a kid."

Anne shivered suddenly. Did Jerry know her age? "You're a dear, anyhow," she said noncommittally. "I've always maintained," he went on naively, "that people aren't happy where the discrepancy in their ages is too great. And if you're really as much as twenty-five, or even twenty-four, I must seem frightfully young. Yet I'm almost twenty!"

"Twenty—thirty-five?" Anne mentally made the dreadful calculation. It wasn't fair—to feel so young and be so old. It wasn't fair!

"Poor Jerry!" she murmured. "Weighed down with years!" Then lightly she took fortune's gift and flung it to another. I couldn't possibly marry you, dear child. If you think I've led you on, hate me, go back to Joan and let her comfort you."

Next morning she led the amiable George, her host, down to the beach. "Isn't sand wonderful?" she said, letting it sift shingly through her slender fingers. "It's so ageless that age means nothing to it. Nothing. And now," she became brisk and business-like. "If your many offers still hold good, just when would you like me to marry you?"

ESTHER RALSTON IN
'THE AMERICAN VENUS'

"The American Venus" Is Showing at the Lyceum Thursday and Friday. "The American Venus," Paramount's much-talked-of comedy-spectacle, will make its local bow at the Lyceum theatre Thursday. Because of its theme, picturesque background, superlative cast and elaborate production trimmings, this picture is awaited with more than ordinary interest.

Fay Lanphier, who was adjudged the most beautiful girl in America at the annual Atlantic City beauty pageant, plays the title role, and in addition, a number of the other entrants have minor roles in the film.

"Unguarded Hour" Scores a Big Hit

What would happen if a flippant, thrill seeking young American girl should set her cap for a conservative, woman hating young foreign nobleman?

This situation forms the unique theme of "The Unguarded Hour," a First National picture, which has its last showing at the Lyceum tonight, and scored a big hit with the audience last night.

Laughs and Thrills Galore in "Mike"

A great treat is in store for all those who go to the Park theatre on next Friday, Saturday and Sunday during which time "Mike" will be on view. It's one of the most merry, fast-moving, thrilling, and entertaining films that has been shown here in some time. Moreover it has the inimitable Marshall Neilan touch, applied in generous measures, having not only been directed by the gentleman, but conceived by his own brain as well.

The story deals with the adventures of the daughter of a railroad section boss, who is stationed near a small desert town.

Many Brainerd Folks Have Found
How to Make Work Easier

What is so hard as a day's work with an aching back? Or sharp stabs of pain at every sudden twist or turn?

There is no peace from that dull ache.

No rest from the soreness, lameness and weakness.

Many folks have found relief through Doan's Pills. They are a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Brainerd people recommend Doan's. S. J. Groer, horseshoer, 822 S. 7th St., Brainerd, says: "The constant bending and straining my back irritated my kidneys. When I got down to put a shoe on a horse it was about all I could do to get up again. I sure was in pain and it became hard for me to do my work properly. My kidneys didn't act right, but when I used Doan's Pills I was fixed up in good shape."

GIRL HELD IN MOUNTAINS FOR A $600 DEBT

Charleston, W. Va., April 28.—(UP)—An adolescent girl is being held in the mountain fastnesses of Sumner county as hostage for a $600 debt, according to a memorandum filed in the state supreme court here today.

The memorandum was filed by the child's mother, Mrs. Norvilla Burrell of Kanawha county, who declared the little girl's mountain guardian had refused to relinquish her until the debt is paid.

The child is 12, and is held by Mrs. Priscilla Medley and Mrs. Medley's brother. According to Mrs. Burrell's memorandum Edna was left with Mrs. Medley by Mrs. Burrell's divorced husband.

A few months ago Mrs. Burrell was granted an order restoring the child to her. Mrs. Medley, however, refused to release the child saying Mrs. Burrell owed her $600 for the child's keep.

FORMER CASHIER PLEADS GUILTY

St. Paul, April 28.—(UP)—A. O. Jensen, former cashier of the National Exchange bank here, said he gave $2,000 to William F. Scott, city comptroller, "to get favors from the comptroller's office," in pleading guilty today to embezzlement.

Jensen was sentenced to 12 years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas, by Judge J. B. Thomsen. He pleaded guilty to the first three charges of nine in the indictment against him.

The money given to the city official was for campaign and personal expenses and was never repaid, Jensen told the court. He related ventures in which the remainder of his defalcations were lost. Total of his pecuniations will reach $30,000, it was brought out in court.

Jensen is 33 years old. He resigned from the bank by request March 2, and was arrested April 13 on a federal warrant.

KROMAN HELD TO CLEVELAND FEDERAL COURT

Minneapolis, April 28.—(UP)—Sam J. Kroman was held to Cleveland federal court in a decision filed today by United States Commissioner Howard S. Abbott who conducted removal hearings for Minneapolis defendants in the alcohol conspiracy case. Kroman objected to removal on the ground there was no specific charge against him in the indictment.

Abbott ordered Kroman to appear in Cleveland May 11, but a writ of habeas corpus was obtained by his attorneys from Judge J. W. Molyneux, federal district court. The writ is returnable May 8, and Judge Molyneux ordered all records of the Kroman hearing turned over to him.

FIGURES DON'T LIE. THEY ARE ONLY MISLEADING

FIGURES never lie, according to an old saying, but sometimes they can be very misleading, especially when they deal with percentages. A case in point is brought out by E. T. Strong, general sales manager of the Buick people.

"Johnny chopped 100 per cent more wood today than he did yesterday," you are told. "Willie only chopped twenty per cent more today than he did yesterday."

It looks as if Willie were getting lazy. But here are the facts of the case. Yesterday Johnny chopped one stick of wood. Today he chopped two sticks. That is one hundred per cent more than he chopped yesterday. On the other hand, Willie yesterday chopped five sticks of wood, and today he worked harder than ever and chopped six sticks. That is only a gain of twenty per cent. But altogether Willie has chopped eleven sticks of wood while Johnny has chopped only three.

And yet the percentages make it appear as if Johnny were really the more industrious of the two. Figures in this case are not very fair to Willie even though they are true. You cannot make a fair judgment on percentage alone. You have to have all the facts.

Willie is not the only one who occasionally suffers an injustice of this kind. Sometimes it happens to a motor car manufacturer. It is reported that the production of one automobile maker is one hundred per cent greater this year than it was last year, while another maker shows a gain of only eighteen per cent. At first glance it appears as though the cars of the first maker have suddenly sprung into surprising popularity, while the demand for the cars of the other manufacturer is falling off.

But once again the facts of the case are far different. The first manufacturer made five thousand cars last year. This year he made ten thousand cars, a gain of one hundred per cent. But the other manufacturer last year made 170,000 cars and this year he made 200,000, a gain of about eighteen per cent. In other words, he made twenty times as many cars this year as his competitor did, and yet the percentages make it appear as if the other manufacturer had really made the bigger gain.

You have to have the figures as well as the percentages in order to judge fairly in any case of this kind. Whenever you see gains reported in percentages alone, remember the case of Johnny and Willie and their wood chopping, and seek out the real facts. Quite often you will find that they are altogether different from what the percentages alone indicate.

Take another case referring to averages. You get $5 a day, another man $10, a third $30. The average wage is $15 a day, but the boss who pays number 1 and number 2, can't see it that way.

GETS NATIONAL MENTION

THE building plans of Brainerd lodge of Elks have been heralded to the world of Elksdom and that takes in the whole United States. In the May issue of the national magazine, under the heading, "Building Plans of Various Lodges are Approved," mention is made of Brainerd lodge as follows:

"Brainerd, Minn., Lodge No. 615. The erection of a three story and basement fireproof brick building, with six stores on the main floor, and lodge and club rooms on the second and third, together with thirty living rooms on the second and third floors. The estimated cost is $125,000 with furnishings at $15,000. The lodge already owns the building site."

Other Elks lodges having building plans approved and mentioned in the same column are Baton Rouge, La., lodge; Brawley, Calif., lodge; Elko, Nev., lodge; Tyrone, Pa., lodge.

A column, in the national magazine, run free, headed "Accommodations for Traveling Elks," will give Brainerd lodge continuous advertising as soon as the new home is opened. An explanatory note mentions: "Living accommodations are obtainable in any of the subordinate lodge homes listed."

This column mention of lodge homes affording accommodations to visiting Elks is eagerly scanned by Elks motoring about the country. Among the Minnesota lodges so listed are Little Falls, Minneapolis and St. Cloud.

FOR BANK PROTECTION

FIFTY out of 87 counties in Minnesota have ranger organizations for protection against bank bandits and others will follow this summer, according to Charles D. Brown, manager of the protective department of the Minnesota Bankers' association.

Coordination of this protective organization with similar movements in neighboring states will also be perfected this summer, Brown said. Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and Iowa plan to join with Minnesota in the cooperative plan.

Systems of communication have been developed in addition to the arming of 10,000 men, all equipped with automobiles, in what is believed to be the most extensive movement against bank bandits ever attempted.

Crow Wing county bankers early organized a ranger association, but so far have had no occasion to mobilize their forces to fight bank bandits.

BRAINERD WOMAN ON RADIO PROGRAM

WOMEN of St. James will present a radio program this Thursday from WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul Gold Medal station. The program is to be presented by the applied education department of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs.

Mrs. Will Curtis, department chairman, will act as announcer. Mrs. J. A. Thabes of Brainerd, district chairman of conservation, will give a talk on "Keeping Trails Green," and Miss Gratia A. Countryman will speak on "A Book Wagon for Every County." Mrs. Joseph Heiertz, Mrs. Fred Austin Mae Hotchkiss Somers and Miss Elizabeth Curtis will provide musical numbers.

The hour set is 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon and all Brainerd should listen in. WCCO is very easy to get and clearly heard at that hour.

"SOME WILD NOTIONS I HAVE KNOWN"

By the REV. ROY L. SMITH, D. D.
Pastor Simpson M. E. Church, Minneapolis

"THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE IS THE VOICE OF GOD"

But sometimes it is very bad dialect.

The voice of history is the voice of God for history shows a gradual betterment of the race. Piracy is gone, slavery is gone, duelling is gone, barbarism in wives is well nigh gone, the saloon is outlawed though we have illicit liquor still.

The voice of the people, heard through long periods of time, is the voice of God. But the voice of the people in an emergency may, or may not, be the voice of God.

The voice of the people called for the destruction of Arkwright's water frame, Whitney's cotton gin, Watt's engine, Stevenson's locomotive and McCormick's self-binder. But God, through the water frame, proposed to clothe the people better, through Watt's engine proposed to lift their burden, through McCormick's harvester proposed to feed them better. Had the voice of the people prevailed few men could have worn cotton, few could have traveled, and most of us would be eating black bread.

It was the voice of the people that sent Socrates, Huss, Savonarola and Jesus to their death. Of course they had their leaders in inquiry, but it was not the voice of God that cried out "Cyprian to the Lions," or "Crucify Him, Crucify Him."

The voice of the people is the voice of a few leaders multiplied by the lips of the millions of humble and nameless who make up the state. If the leaders be men of righteousness then the nation is happy. If the leaders be men of vice, then the nation is doomed.

The voice of the people is the average of the best and the worst. In the long run the best are victorious, but the voice of the people at any given moment may be the voice of hysteria, of fanaticism, of prejudice, of vengeance, of malice or of ignorance.

The voice of the people is the voice of God—eventually.

"GO! GO to—Halifax! Anywhere out of my sight!" Myrtle stormed.

Drury, her young sister, laughed teasingly as she flung back: "Thanky! But Minge Junction is plenty bad enough. Whatever made you camp in it, Sis Flower?"

"Shut up! Let me think!" Myrtle hissed through set teeth.

Drury had the money—rather her guardian did. The pair were half-sisters. Myrtle, exquisitely dark, slender and graceful as her name flower, with the accentings of velvet-dark eyes and red-coral lips, fiery, selfish, dominant, was ill-cast in the role of dependent. Drury was fat, but not placid. A shrewd bargainer, she was relentless in keeping bargains once made. Her mother, grandchild of plain hill folk, had mysteriously inherited a half million. It had bought her a husband, in the person of a renowned yet fascinating spendthrift.

When she was killed in a runaway accident two years later cynics said one to another: "The luck of Drury Greer!" He had been left very handsomely provided for—with only that lump of a baby, named for him, as the fly in the ointment.

Drury inherited all her mother's longing for power and high place. At ten, when her father died, leaving Myrtle scant tangible assets, she had driven her first bargain. Myrtle was to stay on, keeping the home up to Greer level, until Drury, properly trained and polished, had been launched socially and put in the way of making a brilliant marriage—this in return for a life of easy luxury.

Child that she was, Drury had realized this was her only chance. She had no background—all her mother's people were dead. Luckily—in a way. The money bought her only a sort of shamed tolerance from the Greers. All that is, but Myrtle—who albeit she stormed and raved sometimes, stood loyally to her promise despite the protests of Greers, and Lays, her mother's kindred. Her heart had for two years belonged absolutely to one Elliot Lane, a masterful person, restive at waiting longer for his love.

It was this that had moved Myrtle to the desperate venture of Minge Junction—a place she had been told where money counted for everything. At home folk were barely civil to Drury now just turned seventeen. Despite the long bickerings, the stormy outbreaks, Myrtle had somewhat of sisterly love for the lone creature. Until she saw her in the way of being safely married she could not feel that she had a right to her own happiness.

They had come a day back to the gorgeous hotel. But as yet they themselves had not been seen. Raymond Carr, Esq., stood as a lion in the path. He was a sort of human Blue Book, knowing all about everything, everybody, all the nice points of usage. Why, Oh! Why had Fate sent him here? Myrtle had met him casually in her first winter out. He had declined to keep up the acquaintance, telling her hostess: "She is too beautiful—unless she had the million." Poor, fat, free-spoken Drury would be fair game for him.

Drury had vanished. Myrtle sat pondering a quick vanishing by the night train. She started to ring up the office and say so, but sat down almost fainting at what she saw through the open balcony window. Drury, bare-headed, standing mighty straight, facing Raymond Carr. He was smiling down at her—as he rarely had smiled at anything feminine. She had given him the thrill of his life—in blue linen, her broad cheeks richly pink, her clear blue eyes dancing, sandy tendrils clinging to her white forehead, she was an adorable milkmaid. To his dismay he had heard himself asking her: "Would you like a spin to the lake this morning?" And had been answered brightly: "Too late. Mister Carr. Sis Flower wrote for a car as well as rooms. I'm sorry—real sorry she did."

She left him no time for debate, running on: "If the hotel car turns out to be just ordinary, won't you please see that we have a better one, please see that we have a better one."

"I shall see to it that you get it," Carr returned smiling broadly. "Even though I'm only a guest—like yourself."

"Oh! Mercy me! And I took you for a lively man," Drury interrupted, her cheeks true scarlet.

"Let's not spoil things by apologies," he said, touching her arm lightly. "No—don't tell me your name—I want to find it out for myself."

"I'd rather tell you—maybe you won't want to ask—when you hear it," Drury said humbly. "I'm Drury Greer. You—you must know all about me."

She was infinitely appealing—even to a human Blue Book. Raymond Carr took her hand, saying with a dazed smile: "Suppose we go find Sis Flower and ask her to chaperone us for a ride."

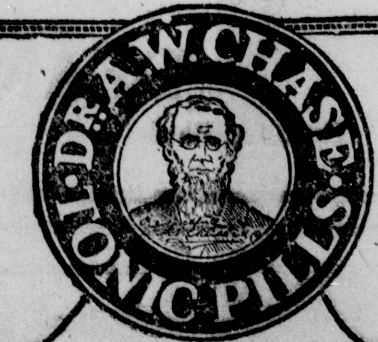

"You—you aren't fooling!" she asked breathlessly. He looked her full in the face, questioning: "Why should I be?"

"Oh! Because—because nobody ever before seemed to like me," Drury said huskily. "A girl at school said I'd never get a husband, unless he was hunting for gold nuggets."

"I am just that sort," Carr answered, trying to speak lightly. "But please to remember—there is more than one sort of gold."

Practice Continuity

The more the art of continuity is practiced, the easier it becomes. We readily form habits. When a man makes up his mind that he will not give up, he gets into his stride and proceeds just because that becomes part of his life. To be aimless is to founder; to "have nothing to do in particular" is to get nothing done. To continue in the thing that uplifts and fortifies is to gain the victory. So, get your channel and follow your chart.—Exchange

GREATEST OF RELIGIOUS SPECTACLES

CHICAGO SOON TO ENTERTAIN INTERNATIONAL EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

RELIGIOUS PAGEANTRY CARRYING BACK INTO THE CENTURIES

By MAX BUCKINGHAM
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, April 28.—Chicago today branded in bitter denunciation as the blight to law and order, is slowly turning its attention to the greatest religious spectacle the nation has ever seen, the International Eucharistic congress to be held in June.

For four days religious pageantry which carries back into the centuries will be unfolded before more than 1,000,000 delegates who will wend into the middle west from almost every nation of the world. Almost every language will be represented by the assembled Christians but the theme will be the same throughout, a thanksgiving unto the Holy Eucharist.

Opening at noon on June 20 with a reception to John Cardinal Bonzano, papal delegate, there will be four days of religious spectacle which Catholic leaders say will be the most elaborate Christian achievement in the nation's history. Massed choruses, the largest of which will have 62,000 voices, reunions, educational conferences and massed prayers will be included. The pinnacle of the congress will be the final day when the Eucharistic procession marches from Chicago to Mundelein. Monks, nuns, papal knights and laymen will form in the long line which will divide and pass over the Lake of St. Mary on to the Hines memorial chapel. There the cardinal will deliver the divine praises which will close the congress.

For Chicago, with all its convention facilities, there presents a tremendous task in caring for the more than 1,000,000 added population.

Every available room in hotels and homes has been spoken for, interpreters have been obtained, welcome signs numbering into thousands are being prepared to be placed at vantage points throughout the city. There likewise is the traffic question. With the loop already teeming with tremendous activity, city officials and convention authorities were busy attempting to work out plans for caring for the influx of motor vehicles which will bring delegates from throughout the middle west. Out at Mundelein, Ill., named after Chicago's own cardinal, the traffic problem presents another difficulty, for it is there that the million delegates will convene for the last blessings.

Preparations are being made for 80,000 motor cars.

The Coliseum, accustomed to housing great political conventions, is inadequate at present to care for the part of the congress to be held there. It is, therefore, being enlarged now for the religious gathering.

In addition, Mundelein, Ill., is seeing its already beautifully laid out scheme made into a place of wonder. Five bridges, over which the Eucharistic procession will pass, are being constructed over the Lake of St. Mary. Drives are being built up to her memorial chapel on which the assembled delegates will hear Cardinal Bonzano give the final blessings which will end the congress.

GANGLAND SHOTS "HANGING PROSECUTOR"

snapped Captain John Stege, in command of all detectives investigating the case. "The Irish were gaining the upper hand, the Italians resorted to guns."

Stege said he was convinced that Assistant State's Attorney William McSwigin had been shot down by accident while conversing with two notorious beer runners, James Doherty and Thomas Duffy. He exploded the theory that McSwigin had been slain in revenge for his strong prosecution of gunmen.

McSwigin, ace of assistant state's attorneys, and known as Chicago's "hanging prosecutor," was making underworld investigations on a Cicero street last night in connection with the Martin Durkin case, in which he had been assigned. He was talking with Doherty, Duffy and two other men in front of a Cicero saloon.

From out of the darkness came a curtained automobile bristling with weapons. Chief of them was a machine gun. Directly opposite the group of men, the guns started blazing. McSwigin and Doherty fell dead. Duffy was mortally wounded.

The two companies of the attacked party hurried the bodies of McSwigin and Doherty several miles from the scene and took Duffy to a hospital where he died several hours later.

For a time authorities believed at least one of the other men, as yet unidentified, has also been fatally wounded but their automobile was found this morning with no evidence of any additional deaths. It was Doherty's motor car in which the bodies had been removed. McSwigin's spectacles were found in the tonneau.

Aroused from his sleep, State's Attorney Crowe called every available police officer to his aid. Stege was assigned to round up suspects and before noon today he had brought more than 100 to police headquarters. "I feel sure," he told the United Press, "that this thing came out of the beer war and that McSwigin was accidentally made a victim."

Then Stege explained how factions in the beer running business had simmered down to two strong organizations, known in the underworld as the Italians and the Irish. The Irish band under the leadership of Doherty and the notorious O'Connell brothers, had gained a great deal of business lately controlled by the Italians and Sicilian group. The Italians, he explained, have been disorganized since the demise of the Genna brothers, three of whom were slain.

"Cicero (a nearby Chicago suburb) has come to be one of the last strongholds of the Italians," Stege said. "The O'Connells and Dohertys have recently invaded it and it looks to me that the Italians have attempted to scare them out."

Cicero, almost completely surrounded by corporate Chicago, has long been a center of gambling and has housed many of Chicago's most desperate criminals.

The shootings last night climaxed the reign of terror which has existed since advent of prohibition.

The first powerful figure to emerge after the war was Dion O'Banion, first leader of the Irish booze runners. With him was allied Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake who recently achieved notoriety in the Chicago jail scandal.

They were accused of buying special privileges from their jailers.

Meanwhile the Italians organized to cut in on the lucrative practice. They were led by the Genna gangsters, a group of six brothers who controlled some of the city's most dangerous gunmen. It was two years ago that the Genna's sprung into control when one of their number killed Dion O'Banion. War has been frequent since then. Curtained motor cars moving up and down the streets of Chicago's west side and in Cicero have proved ominous to the beer running industry. The Irish demanded revenge for the slaying of O'Banion.

The revenge came in the deaths of Mike, Angelo and Antoine Genna and "Samoots" Amatuna. Mike Genna was killed in a running battle with police but the others were mysteriously shot down by unseen gunmen.

Joe Scallisi and Al Anselmi were prominent in the Genna gang and were with Mike Genna in the running gun battle with police in which Mike and two patrolmen were killed.

When the two leaders came to trial recently, McSwigin was named as prosecutor. He made his usual vigorous plea for death for the two gangsters but they were both let off with 14-year sentences for murders.

With the killing of Mike Genna, the Genna gang was thrown into disorder and the other Genna brothers fled the city. Since that time others, including Polack Joe Saltis and Ralph Sheldon, have attempted to reorganize the gang and retain control of the beer industry—but have failed before the onslaught of the Irish. The Genna gangsters even called back Frankie McErlane, considered by State's Atty. Crowe to be the toughest gangster the city has ever held, to direct them. This strategy failed before the power now being wielded by the O'Connells and Doherty.

BLOODY STREETS OF CALCUTTA ARE PATROLLED

ARMORED CARS AND INDIAN CAVALRYMEN IN SERVICE

TO DATE 60 KILLED, 400 INJURED IN RIOTS SINCE FRIDAY

By BERNARD BEILBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Calcutta, India, April 28.—Armored cars and Indian cavalrymen commanded by British non-commissioned officers today patrolled the streets of Calcutta where 60 persons have been killed and more than 400 injured in riots since Friday.

The appearance of the military was in response to insistent demands of the population that the most effective means at hand be adopted to stop the terrorism which has disorganized the city.

Business still was paralyzed today although the detail of troops to patrol the streets had tremendously relieved the frightened population. The lower classes continued their evacuation of the city.

From an economic standpoint (these latest riots growing out of the jealousies between Hindus and Moslem populations were the most serious in the history of the city).

The British governor of Calcutta, who has been holidaying has decided to return to the city where his presence was demanded by angry citizens.

During Tuesday's rioting, which culminated in a raid on the general post office, nearly 30 persons are estimated to have been killed.

The Author's Dream

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

HENLEY shrank back from the huge pile of letters his sister brought in from the latest post as if she had handed him a packet of small-pox germs.

"I shall go utterly and completely mad if I have to answer any more letters," he groaned and mopped a fevered brow.

"Only one of the penalties of being a successful writer. 'You shouldn't write best sellers—if you don't want notoriety,' laughed sister Nan, but in her heart she felt sorry for her clever brother. "Perhaps you should engage a secretary. One hates to be rude to all these strange people who take the trouble to write."

"I suppose writers do have secretaries, but it seems to me a man constantly hovering about would get on one's nerves. However," Henley heaved a great sigh, "perhaps you'd better look one up for me."

Nan, too, smiled, and with infinite relief. For some time Nan had realized that her brother was becoming more dependent on her with each step of his high ladder of fame, but—there was also patient John Westcote, who in turn was also dependent on her and who was quite determined that she would marry him soon and go to Japan with him.

In fact, it was John who found the advertisement in the paper which read: "Mrs. De Peyster highly recommends secretary. Three years with well-known writer, two with Van, the famous cartoonist. Most efficient in understanding temperament."

"I believe he's just the chap for Tom. If you write to him you could get him broken in in no time and with Tom in good hands we—well we can be married soon."

Nan blushed and told John that his wishes were her own and together they began the correspondence that resulted in an interview with the prospective secretary.

When John and Nan faced each other after the interview the same thought flew across each mind.

"Tom will never even see her—if he knows beforehand that the secretary is not a man, but— isn't she perfectly adorable?" said Nan. "I believe she's the very person for Tom. What shall we do?" She raised her lovely eyes to John's face, and what else could he do but enter into a conspiracy to get the author's dream into the author's presence and leave her to do the rest?

"I'm sure he'll thank us in the end," Nan said.

The only wicked thing Nan did was to have a hurried call to town on the afternoon when the secretary was coming out to interview her prospective employer.

Henley, all unsuspecting, sitting amidst a pile of unanswered letters and longing with all his soul for quiet concentration, looked out over the beautiful gardens of his Long Island home and saw a delightful vision moving serenely up the long drive.

"The secretary, sir," the maid announced presently and hurriedly withdrew and closed the door behind her.

When Henley stood up swiftly the girl only smiled a slow, understanding smile that went deep into the core of Henley's sensitive being. It soothed him and gave him a moment's pause in which to collect his scattered senses.

"It is not often I am shut in my own study with a most lovely vision," he apologized quickly. "Please excuse my seeming atrophy. I fancied my sister would interview you—first."

"I will wait and talk with her—if you prefer it," said Miss Collins with her most alluring voice.

"But I most certainly don't prefer it," Henley told her. "It is I who must judge as to the effect of a personality upon my own—isn't it?" He tried to assume an attitude of inquiry. "And why did you leave the well-known writer's employ and also that of the cartoonist?"

Miss Collins blushed a most lovely shade and cast down her eyes. She would have spoken, but Henley stopped her.

"Oh, I see—they fell in love with you. Well—I trust, in fact I know that you will not leave mine for a similar reason. No, no, indeed. And how soon could you come to me. I am in dire need of a helping hand."

"Whenever you like, I can run into the city now and get my few belongings. I am glad you— you feel that my personality will not jar. I, too, know that we will get along nicely and that in no time you will be deep in a third best seller."

"You," said Henley, "are the kind of person a writer dreams of. Now just how many belongings have you?"

Miss Collins looked a bit startled. "I mean," said Henley a bit hastily, "if they are not too frightfully bulky I could run you up in the car and bring you and the belongings back—right away. I need a breath of fresh air," he added with a smile, that told much to Miss Collins. She knew that she would remain in his employ for the same reason that she had left two former places, and Henley knew it, too.

As the conspirators returned in John's small runabout from New York they certainly nearly lost their breath when, in a car going cityward, they saw Tom and his secretary smiling happily into each other's eyes.

RAILWAYS TO USE TRUCKS

WILL SO SUPPLEMENT FREIGHT SERVICE IN TWIN CITIES

St. Paul, April 28.—(UP)—Most of the railroads entering the Twin Cities are preparing to supplement freight service by use of motor trucks, according to W. F. Sailor, representative of the Mack Truck Company.

The statement was made before 200 members of the St. Paul Transportation club at a dinner here last night. Although the names of the roads were not given, Sailor said seven roads are planning truck service within a 30-mile radius of the Twin Cities.

Sailor's statement followed that given out by Alex Janes, associate counsel for the Great Northern railway at the railroad and warehouse commission hearing on applications of 37 motor truck freight carriers. Janes said the railroads admit advantage of truck service for short hauls but said rail carriers are necessary for long hauls.

LOCKE'S RECORD RUN IS NOT OFFICIAL

9.5 SECONDS
FOR 100 YARDS
NOT ACCEPTED

AMATEUR ATHLETIC UNION SAYS
NO ONE APPLIED FOR RECOGNITION OF RECORD

UNOFFICIAL REPORTS SAY RUNNER WAS AIDED BY WIND AT HIS BACK

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
New York, April 23.—Officials of the Amateur Athletic Union will not accept for a world's hundred yard dash record the 9 5-10 seconds mark turned in last week by Roland Locke, star sprinter of the University of Nebraska, it was learned today.

It was said at the national headquarters here that no application had been made for the recognition of the record, but the precedent would make it impossible to consider the application when made.

"From unofficial reports we received, Locke was aided by the wind," Dan Ferris, assistant secretary of the union, said.

He pointed out that the present record of 9 6-10 has stood so long that a new record would not be recognized until it could be made under conditions that could not be disputed.

"It is the policy not to consider records in important events when there is the slightest wind at the back of the runner," he said.

It was pointed out that the wind at Locke's back might not have counterbalanced a heavy track, but, he said, the track conditions were not considered. It is understood that Locke and Nebraska University athletic officials may not ask the time to be considered for a world's record, but the National Collegiate Athletic association, the western governing body of the college track, may consider and accept the mark.

The National association could accept the record as a collegiate record but to get it recognized as a world's record it would have to be accepted by the International federation.

Even if the western body should recognize the mark, it might not be accepted in the east. The intercollegiate association operates in very close harmony with the W. A. U.

Des Moines, Ia., April 23.—When Roland Locke, Nebraska University flash, clipped off the 100 yard dash in 9 5-10 seconds at the Drake Relays here Saturday, relay officials were doubtful whether the record would stand.

A strong wind was pushing at his back and was believed to have aided considerably in sending the middle western runner down the track in record breaking fashion.

Some few observers minimized the wind, however, by pointing out that Locke was running on a soggy track, as rain had almost ruined the meet the day before Locke's record performance.

Athletic officials had been undecided whether to attempt obtaining official recognition of the record.

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—George Kelly, Giant first baseman, singled in the ninth inning and drove Young over with the run that beat the Phillies 9 to 8.

Benge, rookie Cleveland pitcher, singled in the 10th inning and started a two run rally that beat the Browns, 5 to 3.

Bluege's homer with two on helped the Senators beat the Red Sox, 9 to 1, and gave Walter Johnson his third victory of the season.

The Yankees blew Rummel out of the box in the fifth inning and beat the Athletics 8 to 2.

The Robins ditched their jinx against southpaws and beat the Braves, 6 to 5.

Johnny Morrison let the Cubs down with two hits and the Pirates won, 2 to 0.

Ty Cobb, playing his first game of the season, hit a single, double and a triple, knocked in four runs and scored two and the Tigers beat the White Sox, 8 to 7.

While rain played havoc with three of the games in the American association, Kansas City defeated Columbus, 2 to 1 in the only game played in the American association.

Teams of the northern circuit were en route to southern cities today and no games are scheduled.

WHY THERE ARE FEW IRON PITCHERS

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
New York, April 23.—Joe McGinnity, who as the original iron man of baseball used to pitch two or three double headers a week when the need was urgent, has a novel theory to explain why the arms of modern pitchers are not as durable as those of the old timers.

The theory most generally advanced to explain why even the big fellows have to have a rest of two or three days between games is that the athletes of the present day are less sturdy and that the physical standards have diminished.

McGinnity, however, is of the opinion that the blame rests upon psychological influences for which modern managers are responsible. The old "iron man" was no physical marvel and he was built along standard lines. He believes that the youngsters are just as strong now as they were in his day and that they have the additional benefit of more scientific training and pitching methods that get more out of ordinary strength.

"Take a look at the bench of any major league club now and you will see it all cluttered up with pitchers," he said. "It is not unusual to find ten regular pitchers on a club roster and in our day a club was rich that had four good pitchers."

"With so many pitchers to work, a manager has to arrange some kind of a regular schedule for his starting pitchers so that they may keep themselves on the proper edge. The manager may start them in order and tell them they are to work every fourth or fifth day and if there are enough relief pitchers around to act in emergencies, the regular pitchers can be worked in regular order."

"This policy has had a psychological effect upon the pitchers. They have been influenced into the belief that they should have to work without a long rest and that they can't be effective without that rest. If the pitcher goes to the box with any kind of a doubt in what he has it would be far better to keep him on the bench."

Baseball, he pointed out also, has become a much better paying profession than it was in the old days and the players, especially pitchers, are more concerned than they were years ago in prolonging their period of service in the major leagues.

Complaints are almost common among pitchers that they were given a raw deal by a manager who forced them to work out of turn or do some relief pitching when their arm wasn't right. These pitchers feel when they are forced to do more than their share that they are taking life out of an arm that will shorten their time in the big money.

Some grand stand managers criticized Bucky Harris, manager of the Washington Senators, after he had permitted Walter Johnson, starting his twentieth season in the major leagues, to pitch fifteen innings in the first game against the Athletics.

That, they pointed out, was a risky piece of business as it might have blown Johnson's arm for a part of the season or the entire year. Harris asked Johnson several times, however, if he wanted relief and the veteran nodded him away.

Johnson isn't the type of pitcher to consider himself above the interests of the team but in this particular case he would have been acting for the interest of the team if he felt that he was risking his arm by finishing the game and had retired.

Harris, no doubt, felt that Johnson, after nineteen years experience, knew much better than he did, the limitations and capabilities of his arm.

The complaint of some players that managers are heartless and mercenary in their ambitions to win as many games as possible has a counter argument.

Star pitchers are hard to find and when any manager of a contending team finds a star he is just as eager to keep him serviceable as long as the star wants to remain worth a big salary. If any manager thought that Smith, Jones and Green could win a pennant for him he certainly would not do anything that would reduce the efficiency of Smith, Jones or Green.

This policy of saving men is one of Bucky Harris' pets. He said before the season opened that he wouldn't use Johnson as a relief pitcher and that the big fellow would be instructed not to exert himself in running out close hits when there was no immediate need for a runner on the bases.

Perhaps it's the long trousers—

Perhaps it's the imported looking cloths.

Names you should know

You like to know names that everybody knows—name of the man who tied lightning to a kite; name of the man who watched a tea kettle and went out and made an engine. Just knowing such names gives you pleasure.

Yet there are names that thousands of people know that can give you much more pleasure in a much more personal way. Names that stand for the best things to eat, to wear, to sleep on, you can buy. Names that if connected with the salad dressing, hat, mattress you select—or any other desirable thing you select—mean it is most desirable. Names written large in advertisement. Advertisements tell why those are wise names for you to know. Why such names greet you in the best groceries, department and hardware stores. Why those names are in the buying vocabulary of thousands . . . are believed in by thousands . . . justify belief!

Read the advertisements. Don't ask vaguely in a store for "cold cream," "a skillet," "a vacuum cleaner." Ask for So-and-So's Cold Cream, So-and-So's Skillet, So-and-So's Vacuum Cleaner. MANY SUMMER COTTAGES AT LAKES

Marked Increase Shown in Number of Cottages Constructed in District

31 HOUSES, VALUED $35,000

Building in Progress on Gull, Round, Long Lake North, Rice Lake, Etc.

This season shows a marked increase in construction of summer cottages in the district, information received from local lumber dealers revealing that 31 cottages, representing a total value of over $35,000 are now under construction in the district.

The present year, if summer cottage building continues as indications point will set a highwater mark for lake cottage construction. It is greatly in excess over last year at this time, the lumber dealers stated.

Besides the construction of the new cottages, many of them being completely furnished with boats included, scores of cottages are being repaired and renovated. Indications point to a big influx of tourists to the district this season.

The Standard Lumber Co. 401 S. 7th street sold building material for the following cottages:

Harrison and Starck, Kansas City, seven cottages, on the southwest shore of Gull lake. W. T. Carlson is the contractor. The cottages are now almost completed.

Alfred Zahn, of Brainerd is building a cottage on the south shore of Long Lake.

The Lampert Brothers Lumber Co., 824 Laurel street, have sold building material for the following cottages: Staring Co., Minneapolis building two cottages on Rice Lake.

Ole Simonson, Brainerd, cottage on Rice Lake.

J. C. Larsen, St. Paul, cottage on Round Lake.

A. C. Godward, Minneapolis, building on Bass Lake.

A. E. Berthe, Minneapolis, building on Bass Lake.

J. O. Pearson, St. Paul, building cottage on South Long Lake.

Six cottages completely furnished including boats have been built by Louis Heller, of Minneapolis, on Gull Lake. Mr. Heller plans to rent the cottages for the summer.

"POWDER PUFF" LOST

Pet Angora Cat Strays Away From Home of Jack Kylo

"Powder Puff," light grey Angora cat, belonging to Jack Kylo, 12 years old, nephew of Mrs. Elizabeth T. Fleener, 514 Juniper street, has left his comfortable home to wander in the great open spaces of Brainerd.

A city wide search for the pet cat who differs with the majority of cats in that he's an intelligent one was made but as yet "Powder Puff" has not been found.

It is believed that "Powder Puff" has gone abirding for that is the only reason why he would forsake his home for the cold cruel world. This member of the feline species had one weakness, that of attempting the capture of birds who ventured too close.

Mrs. Fleener requests that anyone knowing the whereabouts of the cat to notify her.

CHURCH LUNCHEON

Sixty members of the Intermediate Sunday school department and the Young People's department of the M. E. church sat down to luncheon last evening in the church parlors. The banquet was given by the Blues, losing ten in the Sunday school attendance contest.

Recently an attendance contest for the Sunday school was organized, the school being divided in two sides, the whites and the blues, the whites coming out winners, their reward being the banquet given by the losing side.

Fred Lind, Sunday school superintendent, and Rev. Morris L. Evers, were the principal speakers. A piano duet by Mrs. Evers and Gerry Shraeder was very much enjoyed.

TUBERCULOSIS AND CLIMATE

(By Ernest L. Strader, M. D., Superintendent Deerwood Sanatorium)

The climatic treatment of tuberculosis is no doubt the oldest method of treatment that has come down to us and still survives the coming of scientific medicine. Tuberculosis develops in all climates and recovers in all climates.

In considering a change of climate we must not lose sight of the fact that we are dealing also with a change of environment which often has much to do with the recovery of the patient. We will advise a change of climate for a patient who can afford it and the patient having made the change will improve. Upon investigation we will find that it is not so much the change of climate as it is the change in environment which has brought about recovery, such as getting complete rest and freedom from the worries and anxieties of every day life in the home.

Many patients seek a change of climate when they have not sufficient funds to do so and their living conditions after the change are such as to be detrimental to a recovery. It is more important how we live than where we live. In selecting a climate suitable for a patient we must consider his physical and clinical condition and if possible select a place where he can be brought in touch with many others who are taking the cure and endeavoring in every way to get well through proper rest and exercise, food and fresh air, and right living.

Copious expectation without much cavitation the patient will do best in a dry atmosphere and an altitude above 4,000 feet unless the individual is over 50 years of age or has arteriosclerosis, nephritis, cardiac lesions, etc. Early cases in the young and middle aged do well in almost any climate but better at an altitude over 1,000 feet and in a cold climate. Elderly people do better in a mild climate and moderate elevation.

Laryngeal cases do better in a mild moderately moist atmosphere.

While a change of climate is often of great help in the recovery of a patient suffering from tuberculosis, yet unless we have a proper environment and good food with good air it will be of little benefit. The combination, a good residence, good air and good food are hard to find. Each locality has its disadvantages in some manner and after all it is the open air life with proper food, rest and regular habits of living which will bring about the most recoveries no matter in what climate the patients may be situated.

IN A BOURSKAYA RECITAL REVIEWED

Her Singing No Anti-Climax to Recitals of Poppe and Anderson

HAD DRAMATIC FERVOR

Bourskaya's Voice a Beautiful Mezzo-Soprano of Rare Quality

Recalling the remarkable performances of Vera Poppe, cellist, and Stell Anderson, pianist, as criterions of technical musical excellence, the recital of Ina Bourskaya was in no way an anti-climax. In fact, one wonders that a community so remote from the musical centers of the world could be so fortunate as to hear an artist of such superlative ability.

She was essentially a grand opera singer. Her pitch was perfect—a worth while statement when critics say that only four Metropolitan Opera stars are reliable. She showed excellent musicianship, with effects due to dramatic brilliance rather than tender feeling. At all times she had complete control of her voice; quite as if it were an instrument on which she played.

Despite the fact that she was a soloist with a single instrument for accompaniment and that most of her songs were in the original languages, so vivid were her portrayals that the scenes from which they were called were made real. One's imagination could have seen the other characters of the drama through the background and action.

One seldom sees a singer of greater ease; she broke into song with no obvious preparation—her voice was a beautiful mezzo-soprano; her lower tones were rich and warm, her upper tones metallic but stirring and in no way displeasing. She chose selections from every school of composition: from the old classics to the most modern; from the pen of Russian, Italian, French, German, Spanish, English and American composers.

There is no need to mention special songs—she so thoroughly caught the mood of the different selections that one felt she was master of any type. Especially was her last song, Kapak, a Russian folk song, enjoyed by the audience. The Cry of Rachel displayed her histrionic ability; My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice, from Carmen, was very delightful. "Er lists" was much applauded.

To add to the enjoyment of the audience, Hubert Carlin accompanied her in his usual inimitable fashion. The songs gave him ample opportunity to display his talent. Oweon Coeur had an especially interesting accompaniment.

In summary—the program far outshone any that has taken place this year. It is to be hoped that the members of the club will make a determined effort to increase the membership and extend this privilege to others.

Thanks are due the Patek Furniture Company for the stage settings, and to the Brainerd Greenhouse for ferns.

Chrysler "70" Roadster, $1625, f. o. b. Detroit

Chrysler "70" Means 70 Miles Per Hour Plus

Chrysler model numbers have a special significance and are an actual index to Chrysler performance and value.

Motor car model numbers up to the present time have meant little or nothing to the public.

They have rarely expressed horsepower and almost never miles per hour.

In the case of Chrysler you know what you are buying in miles per hour and all that miles-per-hour implies as soon as you see the model and know the number.

Chrysler "70" for instance is a 70—in other words it delivers 70 miles an hour.

The model number is not the maximum—Chrysler "70" delivers 70 miles per hour and more.

Comparatively few people, it is true, care to ride as fast as 70 miles an hour; but the power which is indicated by 70 miles plus represents the utmost acceleration, in smooth performance, as well as in sheer speed.

We are eager to demonstrate its outstanding superiorities to you.

PROSPECTS NOW BRIGHT TO END COAL DISPUTE

PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT ANTICIPATED IN GREAT BRITAIN

SUB-COMMITTEES OF MINERS AND MINE OWNERS MEET

By CLIFFORD L. DAY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
London, April 28.—For the first time in the long, anxious eight months of the coal industry dispute, prospects today were bright for peaceful settlement.

Sub-committees representing the miners and mine owners met today with Premier Baldwin presiding. It is understood that the premier persuaded the disputants to consider a five year agreement. Baldwin succeeded in reviving the joint conferences last night.

Owners have consented to negotiation of a new wage scale on a national rather than upon a district basis and although there are some reservations to the owners' new proposition, the problem now seems to be amenable to conversational settlement.

Baldwin met his cabinet today to discuss the situation and the 150 delegates representing all miners in Great Britain met briefly under the chairmanship of A. J. Smith, the miners' federation secretary. They adjourned until this evening after hearing a report on the status of the coal negotiations. The owners' central committee also heard the report of its sub-committee which is the point of contact with the miners. If the negotiations fall there is no apparent alternative to a mine strike or lockout at midnight Friday when the government subsidy granted eight months ago expires.

The conferees adjourned after 2½ hours of discussion with the intention of meeting again tonight. No progress was reported, but the mere fact that the negotiations are continuing is a hopeful sign.

WHOLE TONE OF MARKET SPECULATIVE

New York, April 28.—(UP)—The whole tone of the stock market today in speculative as well as investment sentiment was materially improved by the action of the United States Steel directors in raising the dividend on the common stock to a regular seven per cent basis.

Numerous of the leading industrial improved in price particularly General Motors which sold at 132, a new high on the current move on outlook for an extra dividend next month.

In this connection consideration was given to the company's large profits as well as the fact that the motive interests responsible for raising Steel common's dividend are the leading financial factors in General Motors.

A number of other issues improved in price including utilities. Oils are strong. Higher prices for crude oil should improve the basis of profit for these companies.

COAST GUARD VESSEL STATIONED AT DULUTH SOON

Duluth, April 28.—(UP)—The United States coast guard vessel Cook may be stationed here permanently for operation against rum runners, it was learned here today.

Action in the matter by coast guard officials is said to hinge upon the possibility of securing permanent dockage facilities.

If stationed at the head of the lakes, the Cook will relieve the local coast guard of at least a part of its law enforcement duties. The ship is now used in the rum chasing service.
